

Type a lesson. Teach it live.

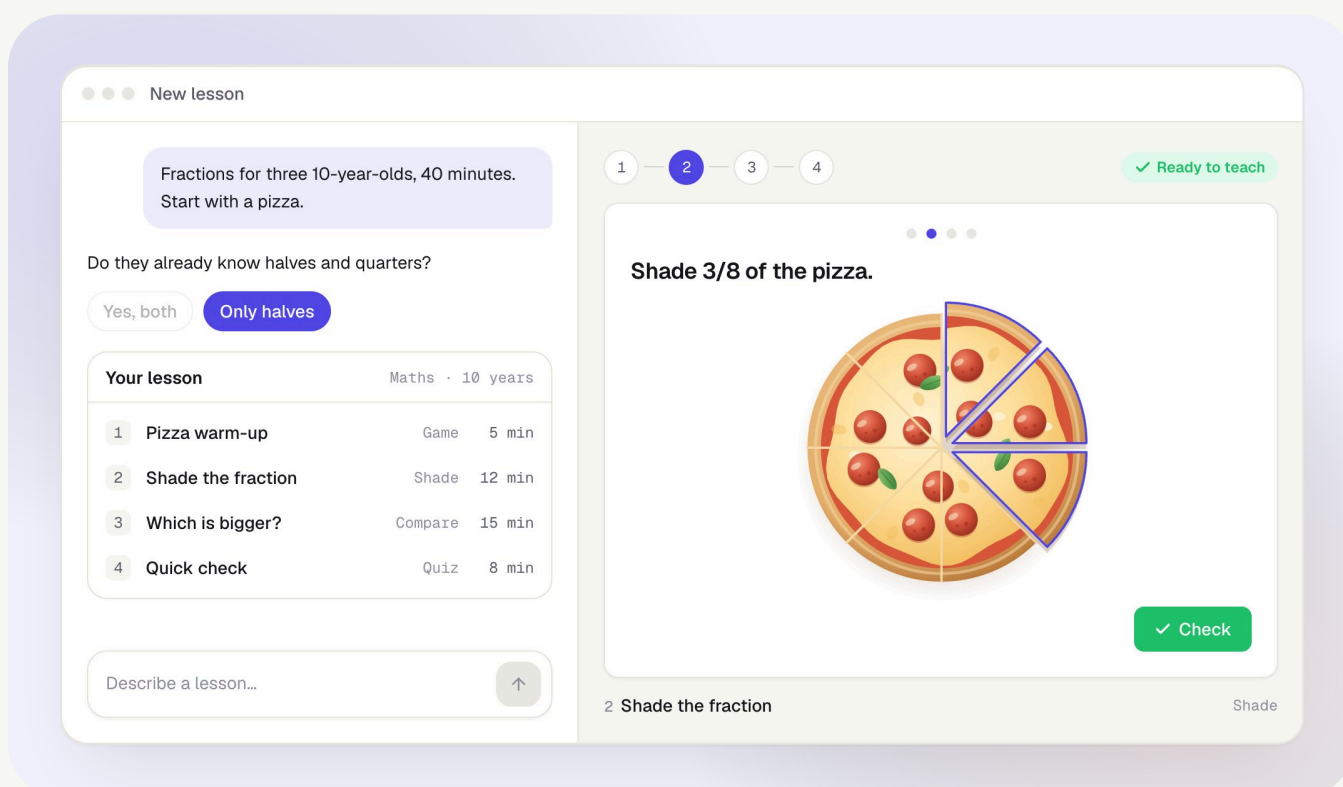

Turn your idea or your own material into an interactive lesson, teach it face to face in a video room, and get a report and homework for every student.

Any subject, any age

One-to-one or a group

Laptop, tablet or phone

Students join with one link

One sentence becomes a lesson: fractions for three 10-year-olds, starting with a pizza.

Before class

Describe the lesson in one message, or attach your own material.

In class

Every student works on their own screen. You see each one live.

After class

Each student gets their own report and homework.

01 · Describe

Describe it in your words.

Write the topic, the age and how long you have — or attach a textbook page or worksheet. Gomently asks a question or two, then shows you the plan.

- ✓ Asks one to three questions if something is missing
- ✓ Shows the plan: reorder it, drop what you don't need
- ✓ Builds the activities, pictures and cover

Your method, your material

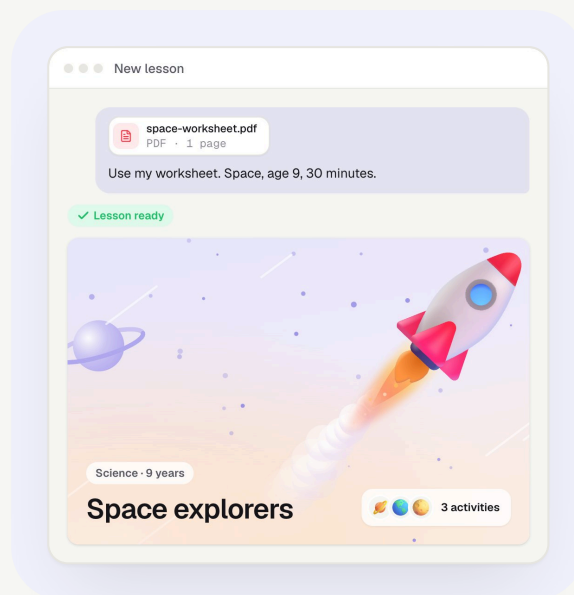

Attach your texts, pictures and recordings. The lesson follows your warm-up and your drills.

Any subject, any age

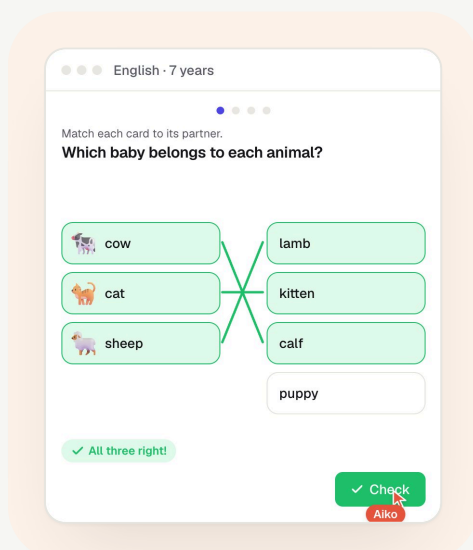

Fractions, chemistry or English for adults: the lesson comes out in the language you write in.

Change it by asking

Ask for changes in the same chat, then rehearse the lesson from the student side.

02 · Lesson

A lesson they want to play.

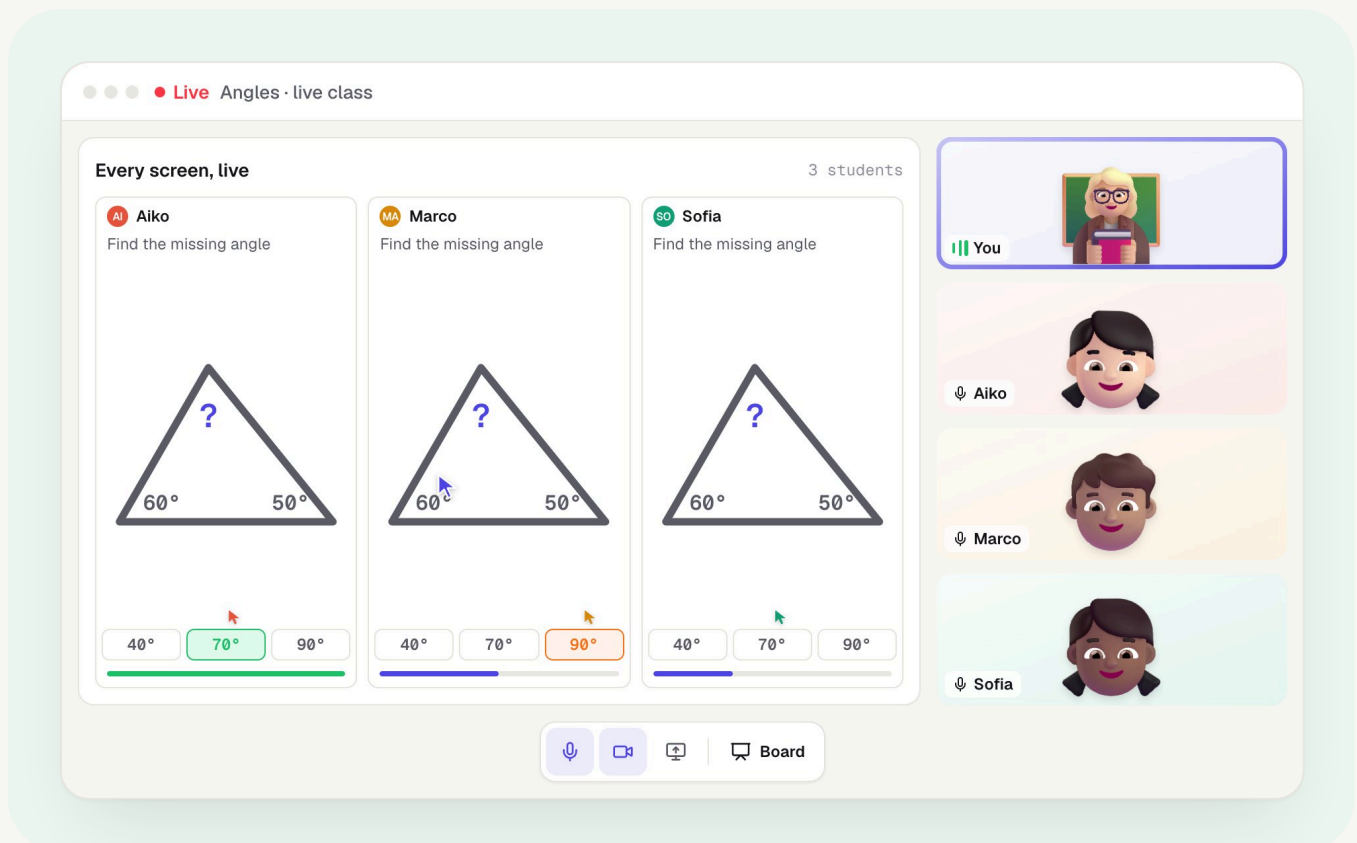

Every step is an activity on the student's own screen: matching, sorting, drawing, games. Each student taps, drags and answers on their own laptop, tablet or phone. Change any of it by asking in the same chat.

- ✓ More than 1,000 activities
- ✓ Quizzes, matching, sorting, drawing and games
- ✓ Works on a laptop, tablet or phone
- ✓ The lesson speaks the language you wrote it in

03 · Live class

See every student, live.

Your class meets in a video room right in the browser: cameras, sound and a shared board. Students join with one link, no accounts, and you see every screen as they work — so you can help before anyone has to ask.

An example class: every student's screen, live, beside the video.

Everything the class needs, in one video room.

A shared board

Everyone draws at once, each in their own colour: pen, text, sticky notes, shapes and pictures.

Give the marker

Show your canvas, then hand one student the marker while everyone watches.

Show on the board

Put one student's work up in front of the class while they keep going.

Take control

Someone stuck? Open their screen, show the way, hand it back.

Everyone follows you

Bring the whole class to the same step in one tap.

Video in the same room

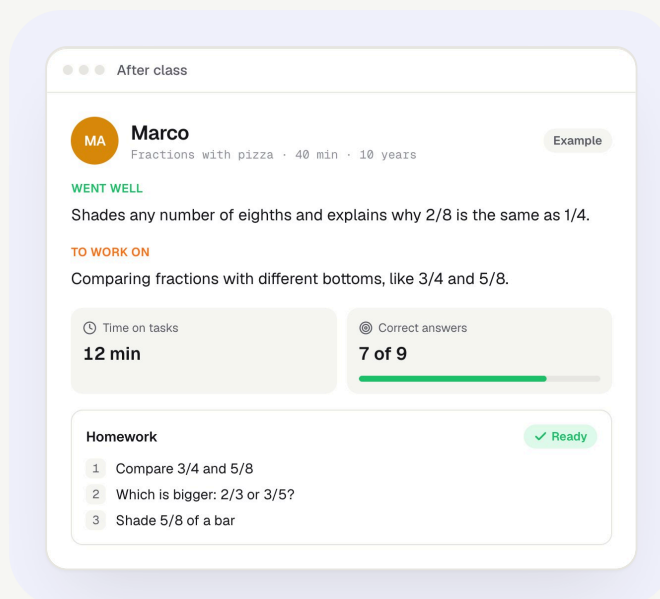

Camera, microphone and screen share next to the lesson, with no second tab.

04 · After class

Their own report and homework.

After class, each student has a report and homework built from what they actually did — ready for you to check and share with parents.

- ✓ What went well, what to work on
- ✓ Time on tasks, right and wrong answers
- ✓ Homework from the tasks they got wrong

A report for each student

What went well and what needs work, taken from what that student did and said.

Homework from their mistakes

Short tasks aimed at the gaps that student showed, ready without any preparation.

Progress you can show

Time on each task, right and wrong answers, repeated mistakes and speaking time — collected while the lesson runs.

Audio deleted after transcription

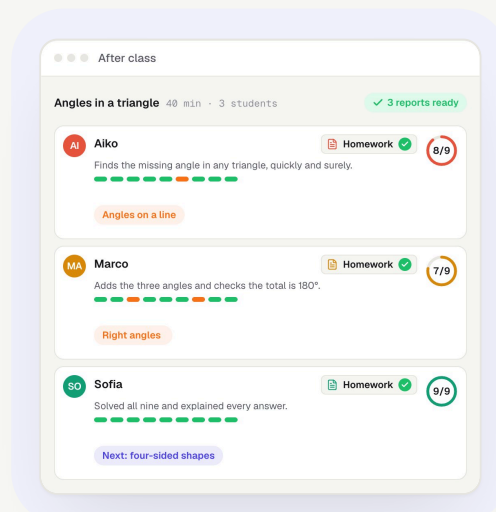

Only the transcript stays, in your account. Students never create an account.

What parents see.

A report you'll be glad to forward: what went well, what's next, and the homework that gets there.

One-to-one or a whole group.

The same room runs a private lesson or a full class. Nothing to switch: one-to-one, their screen sits beside the video; in a group, everyone works on their own screen and one tap moves the class on.

Made for tutors and online schools.

Questions teachers ask

Do students need an account?

No. One link. No account, no download. Students type their name and they are in. Only teachers sign in.

Is video built in?

Yes. Camera, microphone and screen share run in the same room as the lesson. No second tab, no meeting link.

Which subjects and languages?

Any subject, in the language you describe it in. The interface is in English, German and Russian.

Will it work on a phone?

Yes. Any modern browser on a laptop, tablet or phone, with buttons sized for touch.

What about a weak connection?

Gomently sends each student's actions instead of a video of their screen, so their work stays sharp. Video adapts to the bandwidth.

Is the lesson recorded?

It is transcribed so the report can be written, then the audio is deleted. Only the transcript stays, in your account.

Your next lesson starts with a sentence.
